CIRCULAR

All Faculties, Residents & Students to note following E-Mail communication received from JIPMER Alumnus MBBS Batch of 2015:

"We are pleased to share with you that a JIPMER Alumnus from the MBBS Batch of 2015 is a member of the founding team of the Rural Hospital Network - a free-to-access website with details of rural hospitals in India and their vacancies.

India is a country with an acute shortage of qualified doctors, nurses and other health professionals, especially in areas serving a rural population. Part of the reason is the lack of information about verified hospitals, their services and current vacancies. The Rural Hospital Network aims to connect hospitals catering to a largely rural population with health professionals who are looking to work in such a space for both personal and professional growth.

Visit: www.ruralhospitalnetwork.org

JIPMER encourages its students and faculty to check out the website to learn more about healthcare opportunities in rural India and consider the options. We urge our students to spend some time working in rural areas, small towns and backward districts as an opportunity to use their skills to serve marginalized people, and contribute to the improvement of rural health in India.
